Officers and council members of the British Society for the History of Science, 1947–97

JANET BROWNE*

As described elsewhere in this issue of BJHS, preliminary steps towards founding a society for the history of science in Britain were taken in 1946. A meeting was held at the Science Museum, London, on 22 November 1946, chaired by Herbert Dingle, at which Gavin de Beer formally proposed the foundation of a history of science society, seconded by Michael Roberts. A provisional committee was appointed to draw up rules and a constitution. It included:

Dr H. P. Bayon	Mr H. W. Robinson
Professor G. R. de Beer	Dr H. Shaw
Mr C. N. Bromehead	Dr Charles Singer
Mr F. C. H. Butler (Secretary)	Mrs Dorothea Singer
Mr J. G. Crowther	Dr F. Sherwood Taylor
Professor H. Dingle	Dr H. Hamshaw Thomas
Dr S. Lilley	Dr E. Ashworth Underwood
Mr Michael Roberts

This provisional committee met three times over the next few months.

The British Society for the History of Science came into formal being on Monday, 5 May 1947, in the meeting room of the Royal Society, Burlington House, with Dr Sherwood Taylor in the chair. Elections for a president (Charles Singer), vice-presidents, officers and council members took place (see Table 1) and the new constitution was approved. The business of the meeting included a proposal by J. G. Crowther ‘that the Society should have a Journal’, seconded by H. P. Bayon, although nothing further was agreed. Seventy-one founder members joined at a subscription of one guinea (see the list, p. 79).

The new Society was active during its first year. From the very first council meeting, held on 14 May 1947 in the Science Museum, the question of publications became an issue, and a possible journal, newsletter and ‘authoritative translations of classical scientific works’ were in turn explored.¹ A Philosophy of Science Group was set up, run as a relatively independent wing from February 1948 to November 1958 when a separate society was established. This group was initiated by Herbert Dingle at University College London, where most of the early meetings took place. Many eminent philosophers of science became members. The BSHS itself ran to 174 members by 1 June 1948. That month, the Society’s slim, twenty-four page Bulletin began publication under the acting editorship of Samuel Lilley, passing into the hands of N. H. de V. Heathcote in April 1950. The Bulletin included meeting reports, abstracts of papers, presidential addresses, book reviews and miscellaneous notices. It ran somewhat erratically from 1949 to 1961 (vols. 1 and 2, 258 pp. and 116 pp. respectively), towards the end being published as an annex to Annals of Science. It was superseded in 1962 by the British Journal for the History of Science (vol. 1 onwards) under the editorship of H. D. Anthony. The Bulletin also produced occasional supplements on the activities of the Philosophy of Science Group. During the first year the Society held three public meetings in the Science Museum for the reading of scholarly papers and discussion: the papers had to be approved by the Publications sub-committee before being read. Tickets to these meetings were issued to London students but it was thought by council members that students would mostly be too busy to attend.

At the Annual General Meeting on 4 May 1948 Charles Singer initiated the practice of delivering a presidential address. His address, on 'The Role of the History of Science', is reprinted in this issue of the BJHS. Subsequent milestones include the award of Honorary Membership to prominent figures (a practice long since ceased), beginning with George Sarton who received the honour in person on 9 May 1948; the official incorporation of the Society as a company limited by guarantee under the Societies Act on 6 May 1956, and as a Registered Charity on 1 January 1961; the introduction in 1980 of a biennial Singer Prize for an outstanding student essay; and the foundation of an Education Section in 1987. In 1969 W. H. Brock produced the first List of Theses and Dissertations; in 1980 Peter Collins began the Newsletter; in 1992 Geoffrey Cantor published the first BSHS Guide to History of Science Courses in Britain. The Monograph series has gone from strength to strength since its inauguration in 1978. The Society is still represented in the international organizations that were involved in its foundation.

OFFICERS AND COUNCIL MEMBERS OF THE BRITISH SOCIETY FOR THE HISTORY OF SCIENCE, 1947–97

Officers are listed chronologically according to first date of office, and council members according to electoral year. The Society's year used to run from May to May.
